ABSTRACT

A system optimizes a process for creating color separation for a document with a graphical container using a cache by creating a high-level representation of the container as a separated element in the cache; and using the separated element in the cache when the 5   graphical container is invoked a second time.

500006515.doc